

Employers may disqualify employees from bonuses or other payments based on achievement of a specified job-related performance goal (such as attendance) where the employee has not met the goal due to FMLA leave.