

January 17, 2018

Health Law
Practice Group:

Joan W. Feldman
(860) 251-5104
jfeldman@goodwin.com

Vincenzo Carannante
(860) 251-5096
vcarannante@goodwin.com

William J. Roberts
(860) 251-5051
wroberts@goodwin.com

Stephanie M. Gomes-Ganhão
(860) 251-5239
sgomesganhao@goodwin.com

Damian J. Privitera
(860) 251-5504
dprivitera@goodwin.com

www.shipmangoodwin.com

Connecticut Supreme Court Recognizes New Cause of Action for Patient Privacy Breach

On January 16, 2018, the Connecticut Supreme Court issued a decision recognizing a common law duty of confidentiality arising from the physician-patient relationship, and the corresponding right of a patient to sue his or her physician for the “unauthorized disclosure of confidential information obtained in the course of that relationship.”<sup>1</sup> The facts of the case relate to a physician’s release of medical records in response to a subpoena, apparently without first obtaining the patient’s consent, obtaining a protective order, or notifying the patient in accordance with the regulatory procedures under HIPAA.

This case is significant because it provides yet another avenue by which physicians may be held liable for violating HIPAA. This is because the Court decided in 2014 that “HIPAA and its implementing regulations may be utilized to inform the standard of care applicable to such claims arising from allegations of negligence in the disclosure of patients’ medical records ...”<sup>2</sup> Thus, if physicians owe a duty of confidentiality to their patients and violating HIPAA is found to breach that duty, the Court held that patients now have the right to sue their physician for damages caused by a violation of HIPAA.<sup>3</sup> Whether a patient will be successful in such a lawsuit remains to be seen.

In the instant case, the defendant’s own admissions establish that it did not comply with the regulatory procedures imposed by HIPAA when it released the plaintiff’s medical record pursuant to a subpoena.<sup>4</sup> With this ruling, the Court is sending the case back to the trial court to determine whether those actions breach the longstanding, but newly recognized common law duty of confidentiality. While a finding that violating HIPAA necessarily breaches the duty of confidentiality is not certain, what is certain is that physicians in Connecticut who violate HIPAA are subject to potential liability from the federal government

1 Byrne v. Avery Ctr. for Obstetrics & Gynecology, P.C., 327 Conn. 540, 567–68 (2018).]

2 Byrne v. Avery Ctr. for Obstetrics & Gynecology, P.C., 314 Conn. 433, 459, 102 A.3d 32, 49 (2014).

3 HIPAA itself does not allow individual patients to sue when physicians violate it, leaving enforcement up to the federal and state governments.

4 Byrne v. Avery Ctr. for Obstetrics & Gynecology, P.C., 327 Conn. 540, 572 (2018).

through the Office for Civil Rights, the state government through the Attorney General, and now from patients themselves.

Apart from HIPAA compliance, the Court leaves open the question of what else is required of physicians to comply with the common law duty of confidentiality. One unsettled question is whether it is possible that a physician could comply with HIPAA yet still breach Connecticut's common law duty of confidentiality. Unfortunately, this case does not definitively answer that question. What this case does do, however, is serve as a reminder to physicians and their staff to remain vigilant in the pursuit of HIPAA compliance, both to protect patients' privacy and to avoid legal liability from a growing cast of characters.

Questions or Assistance

If you have any questions about this alert, please contact Joan Feldman (jfeldman@goodwin.com or 860.251.5104), Vincenzo Carannante (vcarannante@goodwin.com or 860.251.5096), William Roberts (wroberts@goodwin.com or 860.251.5051), Stephanie Gomes-Ganhão (sgomesganhao@goodwin.com or 860.251.5239) or Damian Privitera (dprivitera@goodwin.com or 860.251.5504).

These materials have been prepared by Shipman & Goodwin LLP for informational purposes only. They are not intended as advertising and should not be considered legal advice. This information is not intended to create, and receipt of it does not create, a lawyer-client relationship. Viewers should not act upon this information without seeking professional counsel. © 2018 Shipman & Goodwin LLP. One Constitution Plaza, Hartford, CT 06103.

289 Greenwich Avenue
Greenwich, CT 06830-6595
203-869-5600

One Constitution Plaza
Hartford, CT 06103-1919
860-251-5000

265 Church Street - Suite 1207
New Haven, CT 06510-7013
203-836-2801

400 Park Avenue - Fifth Floor
New York, NY 10022-4406
212-376-3010

300 Atlantic Street
Stamford, CT 06901-3522
203-324-8100

1875 K St., NW - Suite 600
Washington, DC 20006-1251
202-469-7750

www.shipmangoodwin.com