View Full Bio

Jack Ferdman, an associate in Shipman's Health Law practice group, is a healthcare regulatory attorney with more than a decade of combined legal, regulatory, and biomedical research experience. With a focus on advising healthcare providers and life sciences clients, Jack specializes in interactions with public health agencies and navigates the complexities of federal and state healthcare laws, including the Health Insurance Portability and Accountability Act (HIPAA), Stark Law, the Anti-Kickback Statute, and various fraud and abuse regulations.

Jack handles intricate regulatory and transactional matters, drafting and reviewing contracts and advising on licensure and accreditation requirements, while also supporting corporate compliance strategies.

In addition to his Juris Doctor, Jack holds a Master's in Public Health Policy, a Regulatory Affairs Certification, and is board-certified in Public Health. His unique experience has empowered him to develop cross-functional insights not only as a healthcare attorney, but also as a regulatory analyst and scientific researcher at biotech and clinical institutions.

Since 2019, Jack has served on the Leadership Council of Boston Scores, a New England nonprofit charity focused on student development. He has also authored dozens of peer-reviewed publications and presentations spanning both law and science, and recently contributed an invited textbook chapter in the sixth edition of Health Politics & Policy (Cengage). His diverse background makes him a valuable asset to clients at the intersection of law, medicine, and healthcare.
