David Mahoney is an associate in Shipman's Litigation practice group in the firm's Boston office. David represents clients in business litigation, bringing a combination of analytical rigor and practical judgment to complex disputes. His litigation work includes shareholder disputes, business owner conflicts, and commercial matters involving discovery, mediation and appellate briefing.

Before joining Shipman & Goodwin, David was an associate at Tarlow, Breed, Hart & Rodgers, P.C., where he worked in both the Family Law and Litigation departments. He also served as an attorney at Miller Law Group, P.C. His judicial experience includes judicial internships with the Honorable David A. Lowy at the Massachusetts Supreme Judicial Court and the Honorable Marianne B. Bowler at the U.S. District Court for the District of Massachusetts.
